3 SONATAS GIVEN BY MANNES PAIR

Opus 120, Is Feature of Delightful Evening.

Mr. and Mrs. David Mannes were heard once more at Asolian Hall last evening in a programme of sonatas for violin and plane and also viola and plane. After playing Mozart's fresh and charming work in D major they proceeded to Brahms's sonata in C minor, opus 120, No. 1. The work was not originally composed for viola and plane, but for clarinet and the companion instrument.

Not only is it a beautiful creation, but for lovers of Brahms it has precious associations. It was composed at Ischi, where Brahms had his sequestered summer home, in 1894, and was designed for the use of Muchifeld, the famous clarinetist, a warm friend of the master. Later in the year there was a delightful reunion in Frankfurt, when Joachim and Clara Schumann were present and the two sonatas were played by Brahms and Muchifeld, and afterward Schumann's "Fantasiestuccke" for plano and clarinet by Muchifeld and Mme. Schumann, Not only is it a beautiful creation, but

It was produced here in Mendelssohn Hall on December 15, 1910, by Nikolai Sokolov, violinist, and Edith Thompson, planist.

It shows something of the manner of Cear Franck, who was one of the young man's teachers, and none of that of paper and stationery in this city and man's teachers.

Mr. Hamlin's art is familiar to this poor results. Mr. Hamlin, however, is What vitalizes his singing is his musical intelligence. His treatment of phrase (in the larger sense of that word) is picturesque, and shows that keenness of perception which is essential to the constant preservation of the melodic lines. Added to this are a fas-
